PHOTO LEGEND

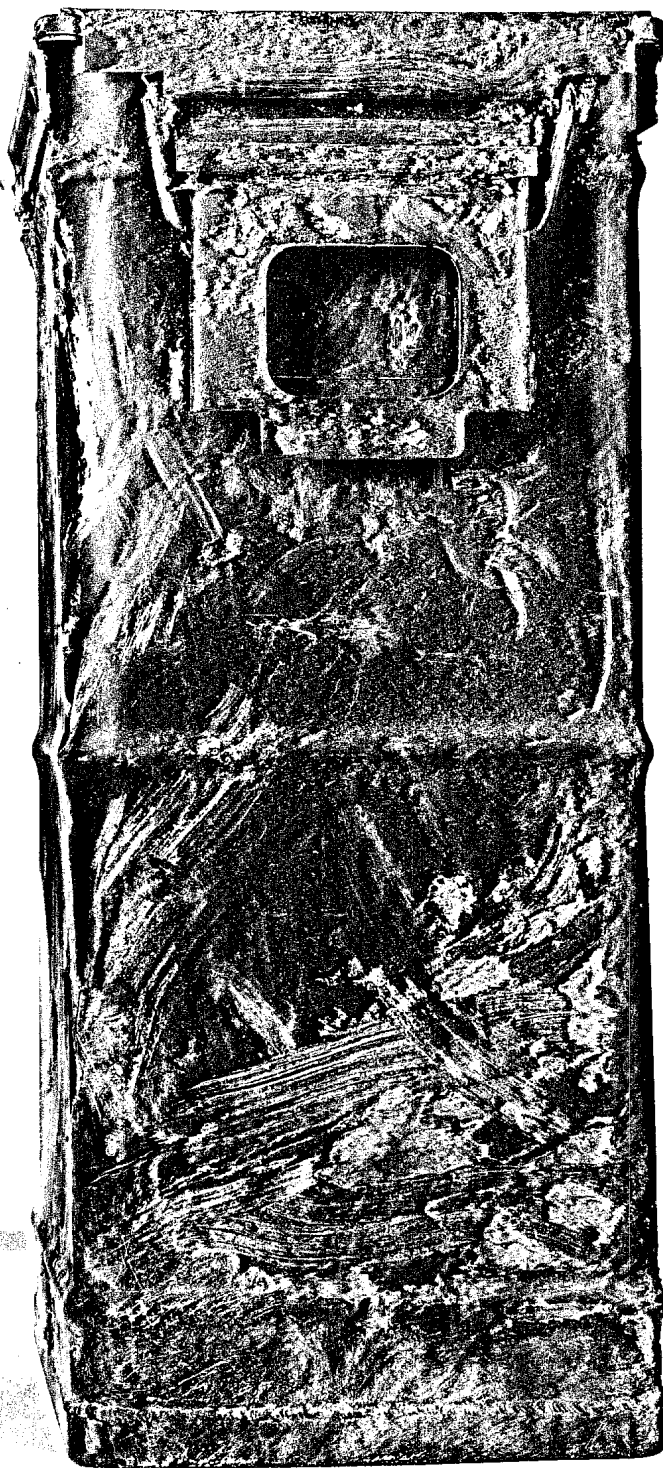

1. Stainless Steel Container after recovery. This container was buried in for one (1) year. There was some signs of blistering of the paint on the top of the container and several small places on the side.
2. Contents of container with brown wrapping paper.
3. Contents after paper was removed. All items were in excellent condition.
4. Interior of container.
5. Pottery jar that was used as a local container. The lid was just placed on the top of the jar. The container was about half full of water and all the items were thoroughly soaked.
6. Interior of the jar after water poured out.
7. Contents of the jar.
8. Contents after the packaging was removed.
9. Japanese five-gallon container. There is considerable rust on the outside of the container.
10. Top of container. The top of the container was heavily rusted and in many places, there were holes rusted through the top.
11. Interior of container and top. The light spots that are seen in the top are holes. Please notice the interior of the container is still bright and shiny with only a few small spots of rust. The paper in the container showed slight signs of moisture although no water was found in the container.
12. Contents of container. Notice the small spots of mildew on the white package. This package is the U.S. Rubber with cloth backing. All plastic had maintained the oily feel of fresh-dipped items.
13. Items after packaging was removed. All items were in excellent condition. See report on film.
14. Radio dipped in plastic with no outer protection.
15. Radio after plastic was removed.
16. Interior of radio. See Gonne's report.
